My eyes became transfixed, and no matter how I tried, I could not ake them off that horse. I put on more steam and went at a forty-mile ate, but the hor e went alongside at a casy gait. I shoved her up to fifty, and went flying through Motlier, Terown. I yelled to the fireman to shove in the coal, and in five minutes more the were running sixty miles an hour. ny, we appeared to fly over the round, but that horse kept alongside, and I was so excited I fell in a dead ant in the bottom of the cab just as e were going into Moors. Our orders were to run to Elko, but the fireman illed up, and the conductor came shing to the front with his hair on d. I had recovered by this time, and as ready to answer all questions. I
